Cold Call Script + Email Template

The exact words that turn a lab manager into a client. Lead with “backup” — it’s a no-pressure yes, and backups become primaries.

STEP 1 — THE COLD CALL (30 seconds, then listen)

PHONE SCRIPT

“Hi [Name], this is [You] with [Company] — we’re a local HIPAA- and OSHA-certified medical courier here in [area].

I’m not calling to replace anything that’s working — I just want to be your backup when your current courier runs late or no-shows.

Can I email you our insurance certificate and rates so you have us on file?”

Why it works: every lab manager has been burned by a courier. “Backup” removes all pressure. You become the primary the first time you save them in a pinch.

STEP 2 — THE FOLLOW-UP EMAIL

EMAIL TEMPLATE

Subject: Backup medical courier on file — [Your Company]

Hi [Name], thanks for the moment on the phone. As promised:

- HIPAA + OSHA Bloodborne Pathogens certified (certificates attached)
- $1M general liability — COI attached, happy to name [Facility] as certificate holder
- Temperature-controlled transport with documented cold chain
- Live phone answer, [your hours/coverage]

Rates: STAT runs from $[X]; scheduled routes quoted flat monthly so your costs are predictable.

If your regular service ever leaves you stuck, call or text me directly: [cell]. I’ll keep your info on file either way.

— [Name, Company, phone, website]

STEP 3 — THE IN-PERSON DROP-BY (your top 10 prospects)

Clean clothes, ID badge, and a folder with your COI + certificates + one-page rate sheet. The 60-second ask:

“Just wanted to put a face to the name — we’re the backup courier I emailed about.” Leave the folder. Healthcare runs on trust; faces beat emails.

The cadence that wins: 10 calls/week = 40/month. Expect roughly 1 contract per 20–40 quality contacts. Two routed contracts can be a full-time income. This is a 90-day game of professional persistence.
